NEW PRIZES FOR THE HIGH SCHOOL

School Board Accepts Offer of The Gettysburg Times to Contribute Two Prizes for Essays on Newspaper Contents.

At a meeting of the School Board on Thursday evening the offer of The Gettysburg Times to donate two prizes to the High School was accepted and the pupils attending this coming year will write essays in competition for a first prize of ten dollars and a second prize of five dollars.

The subject which will be submitted for the pupils' consideration and study, and for the writing of the essays, has not yet been determined upon but will be along the line of what news and other reading matter the daily paper, published in a small town, should contain. It is a subject of interest to every one not living in the larger towns and cities and should be a pleasant one for the High School girls and boys to study.

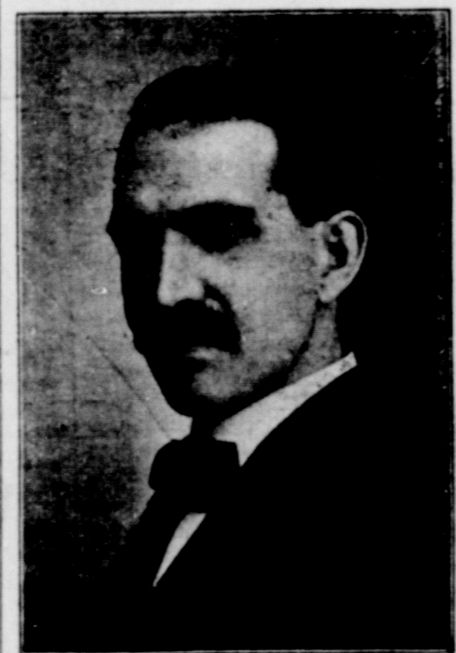

It is now the plan to have the essays winning The Gettysburg Times prizes read at one of the public entertainments held during the school year and the prizes will be presented to the successful candidates at that time. The judges are to be selected by Prof. W. A. Burgoon and The Times.

It was reported to the Board at their meeting Thursday evening that Miss Nora Kieffer had declined election as teacher of art and manual training in the High School and that position is now vacant. Miss Kieffer has decided to continue for a year in study at Columbia University and it is for this reason that she has declined election here. Miss Kieffer was chosen by the local board some months ago but never accepted.

B. F. Myers was elected Thursday evening janitor at the Meade Building.

GOODS REMOVED; SALE POSTPONED

Receiver's Sale at Home of David Yohe in Butler Township Postponed when Goods are Found to have been Removed.

Only to find that the goods advertised to be sold had been removed to parts unknown, a large number of farmers and others gathered for a sale at the home of David H. Yohe, on the Rev. W. W. Deatrich farm, in Butler township, on Thursday. A receiver's sale had been ordered by the Court and advertised by W. A. Taughinbaugh, receiver, with the result that a goodly attendance was secured.

The people gathered promptly and soon afterward Mr. Taughinbaugh accompanied by Sheriff Thompson arrived on the scene and found to their surprise that stock, implements and other effects had all mysteriously disappeared, the only thing remaining being the crops in the field, one-half of which was also to be sold as the property of Mr. Yohe.

Investigation into the matter revealed the alleged fact that Mr. Yohe's son, John Yohe, of Wellsville, a young man about twenty two years of age, had heard of the proposed sale and had come here to get the goods out of the way. He had accordingly stored stock and other effects in nearby barns, it is said, and claims that the whole proceeding was on advice of a Wellsville attorney.

Sheriff Thompson placed the young man under arrest and brought him along back to jail while Mr. Taughinbaugh decided to hold the sale on August 8 by which time it is expected that the things will all be reassembled.

David Yohe, the father, has been doubly unfortunate, a broken shoulder sustained last week adding to his discomfort while the sale was drawing near.

WARNING TO VETERANS

In a communication from Congressman D. F. Lafawn, he states that all Civil War veterans who have not been notified of the increase in their pension under the act of May 11 last should execute the vouchers they have in their possession so that there is no delay in receiving the money. The increase is allowed from the date of the filing of the application and will be paid as soon as the claims are adjudicated under the provisions of the act. Quite a few of the old soldiers in Adams county have received their new certificates and vouchers in accordance therewith and will be forwarded checks for the increased pension from the several pension agents as soon as the vouchers are properly executed next Monday.

Because of the 450,000 claims which will have been filed under the new legislation it is impossible for the pension bureau to place all claims in the files of the adjudicating division for some time. The claims are still coming in by thousands every day. Before they go to the adjudicating division they require acknowledgment, as well as examination as to the formality of the declarations, etc. Each claim is stamped with the date of its receipt in the bureau which will govern the date of the commencement of the pension, if allowed; and as soon thereafter as possible the receipt will be sent to the claimant.

The pension bureau has practically been flooded under the thousands of claims filed under this act. The commissioner of pensions, who recently appeared before the senate committee on pensions, stated that it is impossible for the present force to adjudicate more than from 400 to 600 claims daily and has been urging Congress to place an appropriation of $300,000 for the employment of additional clerks in order that the claims may be adjudicated and the claimants receive their increase at the earliest date possible.

LOTS OF WHEAT SPOILED

The farmers of this section report a great deal of wheat that spoiled on account of being left in the fields during the wet weather. They were unable to get the wheat dry and it sprouted in the shocks, before they could get it in the barns. Other crops are doing well and a large corn yield is predicted for this locality.

SON BOUGHT FARM

SCOUTS GETTING READY FOR CAMP

Forty Gettysburg Boy Scouts Prepare to Go into Camp Near Boiling Springs. List of Things to take along.

Gettysburg Boy Scouts are anxiously awaiting the opening of their big camp at Island Grove Park near Boiling Springs on Monday and busy days are being spent getting together paraphernalia and all the necessary equipment for the camping expedition. Of the sixty or more Scouts in Gettysburg about forty will take the outing.

Scout Master Flagle has ordered that each Scout take with him the following: tent, axe, cot, blankets, poncho or rain coat, sweater, underwear, handkerchiefs, hosiery, towels, soap, brush and comb, extra pair of heavy shoes, old suit of clothes, strong pocket knife, lantern, official hand book, Bible or Testament, note book, fishing tackle, bathing suit and hatchet. This with the necessary "weapons" for mess will constitute the outfit of Gettysburg's khaki clad boys when they start for the camp.

Few, if any, of the boys will hike and it is expected that the early morning train on Monday will take practically all of the campers. Some big times are being planned, with base ball, fishing and other sports leading in interest though the various Scout activities will not be neglected in the pleasures of the camp.

THIRD STRAIGHT FOR METHODISTS

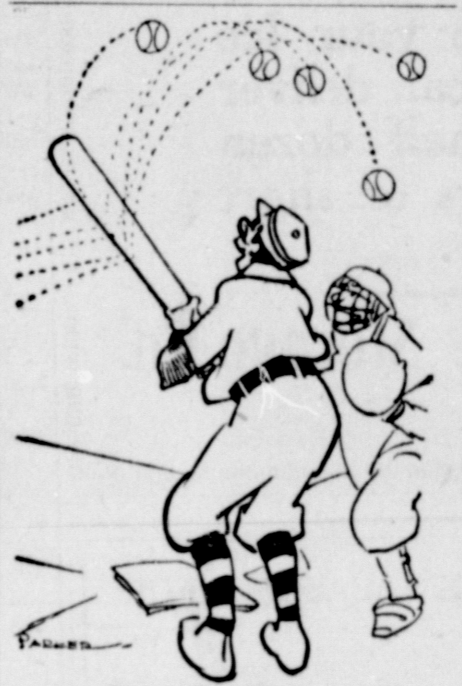

Lower End Team Slowly Crawling up on the Leaders. Defeated College on Thursday Evening. Skelly's Catch a Feature.

The Methodist team won its third straight victory on Thursday evening by defeating College 4 to 1.

Both pitchers were effective, Maurice Ridinger pitching for the Methodists and Sam Hartzell for College. Only one hit was secured by each team. College was there with its usual number of errors, however, and these were responsible for most of the Methodists' runs. College scored one in the first when Skelly got to first on Remmel's error, advanced to third on Slaybaugh's hit and scored on another error by Remmel.

The Methodists tied the score in their half. Ridinger got to first on Slaybaugh's error, stole second and advanced to third on M. Ridinger's out, scoring on another error by Slaybaugh.

Three more were tallied in the second by the Methodists on errors, a

CONFESSES HIS PART IN MURDER

MORE ARRESTS EXPECTED

Latest Confession of Actual Murder Corroborates Stories of Jack Rose and "Bridgey" Webber.

New York, Aug. 2.—"Dago Frank" Ciroflet, one of the four accused of the actual murder of Herman Rosenthal, turned state's evidence.

He will be taken before the grand jury, where he will tell how Rosenthal was surrounded and shot to death at the door of the Metropole; of the number of shots fired and who fired them.

Arrangements to get a confession from "Dago Frank" were completed after the prisoner had been arraigned before Coroner Feinberg and his examination had been adjourned. He was taken into a room in which Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty and Assistant District Attorney Frank Moss were waiting.

The prisoner had been depending on an alibi. He had arranged to show that at the time Rosenthal was shot he was in a saloon in Sylvan Place, in Harlem, trying to get a bail bond for a woman named Rosie Harris, who had been locked up a few hours before. It was in the rooms of Rosie Harris that "Dago Frank" was arrested.

Commissioner Dougherty got to work on "Dago Frank" and blew his alibi to shreds. Then the prisoner began to cry and admitted he was one of the four men who participated in the actual murder, but he swore he didn't fire a shot. The shooting was done, he said, either by "Lefty Louie" or by "Whitey" Lewis.

Ciroflet's lawyer was seen by the district attorney after the prisoner had forsaken his alibi. The mother of the prisoner implored him to save himself from the electric chair, if possible. So it came about that "Dago Frank" consented to go into the grand jury room and tell the whole story of how he was employed to take part in the killing of Rosenthal, how the killing was done and how the murderers got away.

The confession of "Dago Frank" is looked upon by the district attorney as evidence of the utmost importance. It brings the actual assassination right into the case on the description of a participant, and it also serves to corroborate the confessions of Jack Rose and Bridgey Webber as to the hiring of the gray touring car and the movements of the car previous to and following the murder.

Undoubtedly additional arrests will grow out of the story of "Dago Frank" to the grand jury. He knew the whole crowd of gangsters and assassins for hire that assembled in Bridgey Webber's poker room during the two hours before the murder. Many of these men were unknown to Webber and Rose.

William Shapiro, the driver of the murder car, will also be a witness before the grand jury.

The confession of "Dago Frank" and the complete story of Shapiro marked a big advance in the case, especially in connection with the approaching surrender of Sam Schepps, one of the fugitives from justice.

It was rumored that the district attorney was afraid Schepps would be picked up by the police before he reached the criminal courts building. When this was reported to Deputy Commissioner Dougherty he said he had issued orders that there was to be no police interference with the delivery of Schepps to the district attorney.

Schepps, according to a statement made to the district attorney by Jack Rose and Bridgey Webber, is the man who paid the four assassins the blood money for the Rosenthal killing. The amount named is $1000, and Webber says he contributed the whole of it. The money was turned over to Schepps in Lieutenant Becker's presence, according to Webber and Rose, in front of the Murray Hill bath, in Forty-second street, two hours after Rosenthal was killed, and was paid by Schepps to the assassins on the sidewalk in Seventh avenue, between Forty-second and Forty-third streets, on the afternoon of July 15, just twelve hours after the murder.

J. J. Davin, a retired manufacturer, brought the ring to Mr. Baird, after having found it in his pigeon loft. SENATE HASTENS ACTION ON TARIFF

Conference Committees Have Been Appointed.

Washington, Aug. 2.—The senate gave to the Democratic-Progressive Republican tariff alliance complete control of the senate conference committees on the wool tariff, sugar tariff and excise tax bills.

This was the first step in carrying out the program agreed to by the Democrats and insurgents. Regular Republican leaders offered no objection.

Senator Simmons, Democrat, and Senator Penrose, Republican, joined in moving that the senate stick to its amendments to the three bills and ask for conferences with the house.

On the wool tariff bill and the excise tax bill the conferees named were Senator LaFollette, Progressive Republican, and Senators Bailey and Simmons, Democrats.

The adoption of the Democratic insurgent plan is expected to bring about early termination of all the tariff differences between the two houses.

2 KILLED BY FALLING TANK

Huge Butt Crashed Through the Roof, Pulling Over Smokestack.

Philadelphia, Aug. 2.—Two men were crushed to death and a man and a boy injured when one of the floors in the dyeing department of the upholstery manufacturing firm of Stead & Miller, on Bodine street, above Huntingdon, collapsed, permitting the walls to bulge and causing a huge water tank to crash through the roof of the structure.

According to the building inspectors the second floor was overloaded with bales of goods. The floor gave way, they declare, and let the walls sway apart, upsetting the tank, a 16,000 gallon butt, which in crashing through the roof pulled over the eighty-foot steel smokestack on the engine house in the rear.

TAFT DEFENDS ADMINISTRATION

In Speech of Acceptance Upholds His Party.

RAPS WILSON AND T. R.

Asserts Upholding of the Constitution Is Prime Issue of Fight and Declares For Protective Tariff.

Washington, Aug. 2.—Defining his attitude on the tariff and the trusts and denouncing the Democrats and Roosevelt Progressives as endorsing policies that he deems attacks on the constitution and as leading toward socialism, President Taft at the White House formally accepted the Republican nomination for the presidency.

Mr. Taft was surrounded by his family and many friends in the historic east room of the White House as he received from Senator Root the official notification of his nomination, in which the man who presided at the Chicago convention said:

"Your title to the nomination is as clear and unimpeachable as the title of any candidate since political conventions began."

Mrs. Taft, radiant and happy, stood by her husband's side. Charles, their younger son, was there, too. They had come from their summer cottage at Beverly, Miss Helen Taft and Robert, the elder son, were not present.

Moving picture machine operators clicked off thousands of feet of film while Senator Root and the president were speaking. It was the first time a moving picture had been taken in the White House. The state department will preserve one of the rolls in its archives.

In his speech Mr. Taft set forth the achievements and aims of his administration and what he considered the cardinal principles of the party and the real issues of the coming national campaign. He reserved the right to amplify his declaration as the campaign progressed. The supreme issue, the president declared, was that of the maintenance of the nation's institutions and the preservation of the constitution, threatened, he said, on the one hand by the Democratic party and on the other by those Republicans who had left the party to try their fortunes in a new one.

Next in importance he placed the tariff. In the proposals of the Democrats for reductions in the present schedules, he said, lay danger of business depression and hard times. The Republican principle of revision only where scientific investigation shows it necessary, and always with the protective principle in view, marked the straight road to continued prosperity and commercial peace. He asserted the high cost of living could not be traced to the tariff.

Regulation of the trusts he declared was only less important as an issue than the tariff. He advocated legislation supplementary to the Sherman law to make specific acts misdemeanors, but opposed the Democratic proposal of placing the burden of proof on "reasonable restraint" on the defendants. He reiterated his stand for a law for voluntary federal incorporation.

Mr. Taft did not mention either Colonel Roosevelt or Governor Wilson by name, but referred to both.

The Roosevelt theory of "recall of decision" he termed a "grotesque proposition," assailed "unprincipled muckraking" as largely responsible for social unrest, and attacked the initiative, referendum and recall. He closed with an appeal for the support of those Democrats "who view with the same aversion that we Republicans do, the radical propositions of change of form of government that are recklessly advanced to satisfy what is supposed to be popular clamor."

WILLIS VAN DEVANTER.

Supreme Court Justice Who Heard Kansas Election Case.

KANSAS CASE GOES OVER TILL FALL

Allow T. R. Electors Temporarily on Ticket.

New York, Aug. 2.—The Kansas primary election case, which involves a unique point of great importance in the machinery of the national election, was laid before Justices Pitney and Van Devanter, of the United States supreme court.

Directly or indirectly the decision will settle whether eight candidates for presidential electors, who have declared they will vote in the electoral college for Roosevelt, may have their names on the ballot submitted to the people of Kansas at the Republican primary election Aug. 6.

The Taft leaders declare the eight electoral candidates were designated with the understanding that they abide by the decision of the Republican national convention and that if the state primary elected them the result would be contrary to the fourteenth amendment of the federal constitution, which forbids any state to interfere with the freedom and privileges of citizens of the United States.

The Roosevelt people contend that the voters of Kansas should have the right of referendum on the decision of the national convention. The Kansas law is the only one which would permit such a referendum.

At the close of the argument the justices announced that while they had determined to grant the writ of error, they would not sign a writ of supercedas or similar order which would interfere with the ballots to be used on Tuesday's election, because of the importance of the question, which was such that it should be determined by the entire court before the ballot containing the names of the electors was interfered with. This permits the Roosevelt electors to stand on the primary ticket.

WIFE SAYS GRACE SHOT HIMSELF

Declares Pistol Went Off While They Struggled.

SHE TELLS OF THREATS

Accused Woman Testified That Husband Had Tried to Kill Her on Two Occasions.

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 2.—"I did not shoot him, and he knows it—as God is my judge," exclaimed Mrs. Daisy Opie Grace, formerly of Philadelphia, after she had taken the stand to defend herself against the charge of having attempted to murder her husband, Eugene H. Grace.

Mrs. Grace declared that the bullet which paralyzed her husband was fired from a pistol with which he had threatened to kill her only a moment before, during a struggle for the possession of a power of attorney which she had given to him, and which she wanted to destroy.

They were grappling, she said, and the weapon was in Grace's hand. In the tussle they fell across the bed. There was a report, she testified, and her husband loosed his hold.

She was alarmed and wanted to call a doctor, but Grace, according to her testimony, forbade her. He felt no pain, and said he could dress the wound himself. At this order, her testimony ran, she took the revolver from the room and then prepared to go to Newnan, Ga., to the home of her mother-in-law, Mrs. S. L. Hill, in accordance with a previously arranged plan.

Grace made her promise not to reveal that they had been fighting, she said, and this was the reason that when she first was accused she had kept silence and had not admitted that she was present when her husband was shot.

This line of defense had been announced previously by James A. Branch, her attorney. When the first admission was made that Mrs. Grace had been in the room during the shooting it created profound astonishment in the crowded courtroom.

When Mrs. Grace herself took the stand, however, she went even further than her lawyer had gone. While the crippled Grace lay on a stretcher where he could hear every word and watch every change of expression on her face, she declared in a voice that could be heard in all parts of the room that twice during their short married life he had tried to kill her.

Shortly after they had been married, she said, he persuaded her to make a will in his favor. Then they took a trip to Newfoundland. One night during the voyage he tried to push her overboard, she said.

At another time, she said, he had chased her around their home in Philadelphia with a pistol, threatening to kill her.

Grace frequently beat and abused her, she testified, and he lived entirely upon her money. She went into details as to the amount of money she had given him. The amount was estimated at between $15,000 and $20,000.

The quarrel for possession of the power of attorney, she said, had been prompted in part by jealousy. She suspected another woman. She thought he was going to take this woman to Philadelphia when he went there to sell all the property holdings that had been left to her by her former husband, Webster H. Opie.

Dr. S. H. Green, the Fulton county physician, said he had examined Mrs. Grace on March 8, while she was confined in the tower. She complained of throat trouble and was very hoarse. She refused to allow him to look inside her throat, but he noticed two bruises outside. The throat, he said, was badly swollen. While he was examining Mrs. Grace, he said, he noticed that both her arms and one wrist were bruised.

While she testified Mrs. Grace apparently was repressing strong emotion, but outwardly she appeared to be calm.

"Gentlemen," she said, speaking toward the jury, "I did not shoot Mr. Grace, and he knows I did not."

Then she looked directly into the eyes of her husband. The face of each paled, but they stared steadily into each other's eyes for several seconds. At last the accused woman turned to the jurors and continued her statement.

BEHEADS MAN WHO TESTIFIED

Headless Body With 40 Stab Wounds Found.

New York, Aug. 2.—The headless body of Carmela Crapa, an Italian laborer, was found on the Long Island railroad tracks at Glen Cove. Crapa was the victim of a Black Hand gang that repeatedly threatened his life in revenge.

Crapa, a few weeks ago, gave some testimony in a justice's court which sent two of his fellow countrymen to Blackwell's Island for insulting a girl.

There were forty stab wounds in Crapa's body, which was placed near the tracks to create the impression that he had been run over by a train.

Coroner Luyster has sent to Amityville for bloodhounds to trail the murderers.

Engineer Benjamin Bolder was running his train into the Nassau station when he saw a figure lying near the rails. He stopped the train and found the body. The head was picked up some distance away.

The coroner believes the body was carried to the spot where it was found.

CHAPTER VI.

In Which Captain Nat Picks Up a Derelict.

It is probable that John Ellery never fully realized the debt of gratitude he owed to the fog and the squall and to Captain Nat Hammond. Trumet, always hungry for a sensation, would have thoroughly enjoyed arguing and quarreling over the minister's visit to the Come-Outer meeting, and, during the fracas, Keziah's parson might have been more or less battered. But Captain Nat's brilliant piloting of the old packet was a bit of seamanship which every man and woman on that foambordered stretch of sand could understand and appreciate, and the minister's indiscretion was all but forgotten in consequence. The "Daily Advertiser" gloated over it, of course, and Captain Elkanah brought it up at the meeting of the parish committee, but there Captain Zeb Mayo championed the young man's course and proclaimed that, fur's he was concerned, he was for Mr. Ellery more'n ever. "A young greenhorn with the spunk to cruise singlehanded right into the middle of the Come-Outer school and give an old bull whale like Eben the gaff is the man for my money," declared Zebedee. Most of his fellow-committee agreed with him. "Not guilty, but don't do it again," was the general verdict.

Keziah watched anxiously for a hint concerning her parson's walk in the rain with Grace, but she heard nothing, so congratulated herself that the secret had been kept. The tide at Trumet, on the bay side, goes out for a long way, leaving uncovered a mile and a half of flats, bare and sandy, or carpeted with sea eed. Between these flats are the channels, varying at low water from two to four feet in depth, but deepening rapidly as the tide flows.

The best time to visit the flats—tide serving, of course—is the early morning at sunrise. Then there is an inspiration in the wide expanse, a snap and tang and joy in the air. Ellery had made up his mind to take a before-breakfast tramp to the outer bar and so arose at five, tucked a borrowed pair of fisherman's boots beneath his arm, and, without saying anything to his housekeeper, walked down the lawn behind the parsonage, climbed the rail fence, and "cut across lots" to the pine grove on the bluff. There he removed his shoes, put on the boots, waded through the mealy yellow sand forming the slope of the bluff, and came out on the white beach and the inner edge of the flats. Then he splashed on, bound out to where the fish weirs stood, like webby fences, in the distance.

A cart, drawn by a plodding horse and with a single individual on its high seat, was moving out from behind the breakwater. Some fisherman driving out his weir, probably. The minister had been on the bar a considerable time before he began to think of returning to the shore. He was hungry, but was enjoying himself too well to mind. The flats were all his that morning. Only the cart and his driver were in sight and they were half a mile off. He looked at his watch, sighed, and reluctantly started to walk toward the town; he mustn't keep Mrs. Coffin's breakfast waiting too long.

The first channel he came to was considerably deeper than when he forded it on the way out. He noticed this, but only vaguely. The next, however, was so deep that the water splashed in at the top of one of his boots. He did notice that, because though he was not wearing his best clothes, he was not anxious to wet his "other ones." The extent of his wardrobe was in keeping with the size of his salary.

And the third channel was so wide and deep that he saw at once it could not be forded, unless he was willing to plunge above his waist.

He hurried along the edge, looking for a shallower place, but found none. At last he reached the point of the flat he was on and saw, to his dismay, that here was the deepest spot yet, a hole, scoured out by a current like a mill race. Turning, he saw, creeping rapidly and steadily together over the flat behind him, two lines of foam, one from each channel. His retreat was cut off.

He was in for a wetting, that was sure. However, there was no help for it, so he waded in. The water filled his boots there, it gurgled about his hips, and beyond, as he could see, it seemed to grow deeper and deeper. The current was surprisingly strong; he found it difficult to keep his footing in the soft sand. It looked as though he must swim for it, and to swim in that tide would be no joke.

Then, from behind him, came a hail. He turned and saw moving toward him through the shallow water now covering the flat beyond the next channel, the cart he had seen leave the shore by the packet wharf, and, later, on the outer bar. The horse was jogging along, miniature keysers spouting beneath its hoofs. The driver waved to him.

"Hold on, mate," he called. "Delay there. Stay where you are. I'll be alongside in a shake. Git dap, January!"

Ellery waded back to meet this welcome arrival. The horse plunged into the next channel, surged through it, and emerged dripping. The driver pulled the animal into a walk.

"Say," he cried, "I'm cruisin' your way; better get aboard, hadn't you? There's kind of a heavy dew this mornin'. Whoa, Bill!"

"Bill" or "January" stopped with apparent willingness. The driver leaned down and extended a hand. The minister took it and was pulled up to the seat.

"Whew!" he panted. "I'm much obliged to you. I guess you saved me from a ducking, if nothing worse."

The horse, a sturdy, sedate beast to whom all names seemed to be alike, picked up his feet and pounded them down again. Showers of spray flew about the heads of the pair on the seat.

"I ain't so sure about that duckin'," commented the rescuer. "Hum! I guess likely we'll be out of soundin' if we tackle that sink hole you was undertakin' to navigate. Let's try it a little further down."

Ellery looked his companion over. "Well," he observed with a smile, "from what I've heard of you, Captain Hammond, I rather guess you could navigate almost any water in this locality and in all sorts of weather."

The driver turned in surprise. "So?" he exclaimed. "You know me, do you? That's funny. I was tryin' to locate you, but I ain't been able to. You ain't a Trumette, I'll bet on that."

"Yes, I am."

"Tut! tut! tut! you don't tell me, Say, Shipmate, you hurt my pride. I did think there wa'n't a soul that ever trod sand in this village that I couldn't name on sight, and give the port they hailed from and the names of their owners. But you've got me on my beam ends. And yet you knew me."

"Of course I did. Everybody knows the man that brought the packet home."

The cart was afloat. The horse, finding wading more difficult than swimming, began to swim.

"Now I'm skipper again, sure enough," remarked Hammond. "Ain't gettin' seasick, are you?"

The minister laughed.

"No," he said.

"Good! she keeps on a fairly even keel, considerin' her build. There she strikes! That'll do, January; you needn't try for a record voyage. Walkin' more in your line than playin' steamboat. We're over the worst of it now. Say! you and I didn't head for port any too soon, did we?"

"No, I should say not. I ought to have known better than to wait out there so long. I've been warned about this tide. I—"

"Ssh-sh! that's all right. Always glad to pick up a derelict, may be a chance for salvage, you know. Here's the last channel and it's an easy one. There! now it's plain sailin' for dry ground."

The old horse, breathing heavily from his exertions, trotted over the stretch of yet uncovered flats and soon mounted the slope of the beach. The minister prepared to alight.

"Captain Hammond," he said, "you haven't asked me my name."

"No, I seldom do more'n once. There have been times when I'd just as soon cruise without too big letters alongside my figurehead."

"Well, my name is Ellery."

"Hey? What? Oh, ho! ho! ho!"

He rocked back and forth on the seat. The minister's feelings were a bit hurt, though he tried not to show it.

"You mustn't mind my laughin'," explained Nat, still chuckling. "It ain't at you. It's just because I was wonderin' what you'd look like if I should meet you and now— Ho! ho! You see, Mr. Ellery, I've heard of you, same as you said you'd heard of me."

The minister, who had jumped to the ground, looked up.

"Captain Hammond," he said, "I'm very glad indeed that I met you. Not alone because you helped me out of a bad scrape; I realize how bad it might have been and that—"

"Shsh, shh! Nothin' at all. Don't be foolish."

"But I'm glad, too, because I've heard so many good things about you that I was sure you must be worth knowing. I hope you won't believe I went to your father's meeting with any—"

"No, no! Jumpin' Moses, man! I don't find fault with you for that. I understand, I guess."

"Well, if you don't mind the fact that I am what I am, I'd like to shake hands with you."

Nat reached down a big brown hand.

"Same here," he said. "Always glad to shake with a chap as well recommended as you are. Yes, indeed, I mean it. You see, you've got a friend that's a friend of mine, and when she guarantees a man to be A. B., I'll ship him without any more questions."

Breakfast had waited nearly an hour when the minister reached home. Keziah, also, was waiting and evidently much relieved at his safe arrival.

"Sakes alive!" she exclaimed, as she met him at the back door. "Where in the world have you been, Mr. Ellery? Soakin' wet again, too!"

He told briefly the story of his morning's adventure. The housekeeper listened with growing excitement.

"Heavens to Betsy!" she interrupted. "Was the channel you planned to swim the one at the end of the flat by the longest weir leader?"

"Yes."

"My soul! there's been two men drowned in that very place at half tide. And they were good swimmers. After this I shan't dare let you out of my sight."

"So? Was it as risky as that? Why, Captain Hammond didn't tell me so. I must owe him more even than I thought."

Machine to Guard Flocks.

Virgin Connell, a sheepman of Antelope Valley, has invented a novel device for protecting his lambs from coyotes.

It consists of an electrical device that sets off an explosion every hour and rids any given locality of coyotes. The timing of the explosions was set at 60 minute intervals after a close study of the traits of the destructive animals. The explosion causes a hasty retreat and before the coyote decides on another attack he is again scared off.—Carson City Correspondence Los Angeles Examiner.

SAW THREE FINE DEER

Dr. Samuel G. Dixon, State Health commissioner, returned from a visit to the State Tuberculosis Sanitarium at Mont Alto. On the road down from the sanitarium to the station, a distance of a few miles, Dr. Dixon was confronted directly in the road by three fine deer, a doe and two well grown fawns. The wild animals stood and watched the approach of the team until quite close when they moved off leisurely into the woods. The reservation on which the sanitarium is located is full of deer, and they are very tame, frequently going to the houses to get salt and other things to eat. Some time ago a herd of twelve were seen in a bunch and last spring a bunch of seventeen that had been after salt at the creek houses stood still long enough to be photographed. It is forbidden to kill deer on the reservation, but in the woods surrounding they are plentiful and in season hunters have fine sport killing many bucks.
